Lambard has sought a restraining order to prohibit Manning from coming within 500 yards of her, located at 5525 Rotherham Road in Rosemont. Manning was convicted of a misdemeanor for allegedly stalking her in late 2012. He was ordered to pay Lambard $1,000 in damages. Lambard said she has been rehoused in Shelton Township in Washington County after she filed the restraining order. "I was just so afraid for my safety," she said in a telephone interview. "My parents have since moved up to Madison." Lambard said she saw Manning nearly every day after she moved into her Clinton Township home. She said she would see Manning in his car near her home, and would later hear him talking on his cell phone while he was parked behind her home, sometimes for hours. "He made it clear to me that he was stalking me," she said. She said she reported the behavior to the Rosemont Police Department but was told the behavior was not illegal. "It wasn't until I said I was going to report it to the police that they told me there was nothing they could do to stop him," she said. Lambard said she later started looking up websites that addressed stalking behavior. "The stories I was reading, if I had said what I said (to Manning), I would have been charged for harassment or something," she said. "I was convinced that no one was going to do anything." Lambard said she recently found out Manning was arrested by the Rosemont Police Department and charged with obstructing justice. She said she had not been notified of that arrest. Lambard said she recently took a leave of absence from her job as a secretary at a lawyer's firm in Union County. She said she recently found out Manning had been hired by the law firm, where she worked, on July 23. Lambard said her duties at the law firm included handling personal data that was
